The Tariff Plank.

"We denounce the McKinley tariff law enacted by the Fifty-first Congress as the culminating atrocity of class legislation; we denounce Republican protection as a fraud, a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few. We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the Federal Government has no constitutional power to enforce and collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue only, and demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the government, honestly and economically administered."

O'Kelly, who killed Bob Ford, the slayer of Jesse James, has been given a life sentence.

Miss Ella L. Knowles, a young female lawyer of Montana, has been nominated by the third party for attorney general of the state. She is 28 years old.

John C. Herndon, the popular Louisville drummer, whom every body knows, is said to be on Gov. Brown's slate for Bank Examiner under the new law.

The cattle war in Wyoming, the labor insurrection in Pennsylvania and the strikers' armed uprising in Idaho are all "outrages" that have occurred in Republican states worth of Mason and Dixon's line.

The silver question will not be an issue in the present campaign, but will have to wait until after the election. The House has defeated a motion to fix a day for the consideration of the Stewart free coinage bill, which ends the matter for this session.

The Henderson papers claim to have it from "a reliable source" that Dr. Clardy will be a candidate for Congress before the convention now near at hand. This will be news to Dr. Clardy's friends and possibly to the Doctor himself.

Tom Pettit attempted to have the railroad bill amended so as to require the commissioners to reside in Frankfort, but failed. His motive was evidently to annoy Urey Woodson, who is a terror to the little demagogue. Pettit's "Me Too" Birkhead, succeeded in having an amendment adopted cutting down the salaries of the commissioners from $2,000 to $1,800, but under the constitution no public officer's salary can be changed during his term.

BLOODSHED AT PADUCAH.

A Race Riot and a State Guard Killed.

A mob of 75 negroes assaulted the Paducah jail Monday night for the purpose of lynching J. E. Randle, a white man in jail for killing a colored man, Feb. 21, 1891.

The Gibraltar Guards were called out and a clash occurred between the soldiers and the mob. The mob opened fire upon the troops and one of them, Elmer Edwards, a young soldier, was shot in the abdomen and died the next day. The soldiers returned the fire and put the negroes to flight. Chief Augustus of the fire department, was also badly wounded by the rioters and Mrs. Mat Husbands was shot in the hand, a ball going through the side of her house, as she lay in bed. There was much excitement all the next day, but Wednesday everything was quiet.

Tuesday night 110 special policemen patrolled the city with orders to arrest everybody caught on the streets after 10 o'clock. Several such parties were discovered and arrested. Only one collision occurred during the night. At about 10 o'clock a number of negroes had congregated in the ravine beyond the Tennessee street bridge. Marshal Wilcox sent a posse of men out there to arrest them, which was done, but not until a volley had been fired. At 11 o'clock another squad was discovered near Bryant's store on Trimble street. They were approached by a squad of patrolmen who ordered them to throw down their arms and surrender. A part of them did so, but others fled and were fired at, a negro named Purvine being shot and seriously wounded. Not over a dozen arrests were made. It is now believed that the trouble is about over, although every effort is to be made to permanently disperse any armed negro organization in the city. Offers of help were received from Fulton, Princeton and several other towns. Adjutant General Gross arrived at 3:30 Wednesday morning, and was received at the train by a detachment from Company C.

Judge Grace Accepts.

Cadiz, July 13, 1892.

Messrs. S. E. Trice, H. C. Gant, Geo. M. Steele, James M. Glass, James Rodman, C. M. Latham, W. E. Ragdale, F. L. Waller, H. M. Frankie, S. L. Frogge and others:

GENTLEMEN:—

In response to your very kind and complimentary endorsement of my official conduct as Judge of the Second Judicial District of Kentucky, and request that I again become a candidate for Circuit Judge in our new Judicial District, (the Third) and so kindly tendering me your support I return my sincere thanks and assure you that no event connected with my life, or official career, will be remembered with more gratitude and pleasure than this, coming as it does from the largest county in the District, and so numerous signed and by persons, too, personally known to me to be conservative in their opinions, and who may be accepted as fair representatives of the general public sentiment in their county. It is gratifying to me to know that in the discharge of my official duties I have secured and retain their confidence and approval. I have also lately received many other expressions of similar character from citizens from other portions of our District.

In response, therefore, to your call, as well as to others from other portions of the District, I have authorized the press of the District to announce me as a candidate for the office in question. And should the people of the District honor me with the position, whatever ability and experience I have shall be faithfully devoted to their service, but whether I shall again be so honored or not, you gentlemen, may rest assured that I shall always remember your kindness with the liveliest gratitude.

Yours Truly,

JNO. R. GRACE.

It Pleases the Oculists.

"There's a good time coming for oculists and opticians," remarked an eye specialist to the reporter. "A while ago the blackboards in the public schools aided greatly in sending to our round-eyed children for treatment for near-sightedness. The press all over the country called attention to this fact, and the method of instruction in our public schools has been changed for the better in that respect. But a new class of patients is coming on. These cheap editions of standard authors, where thousands of impressions are taken from one set of stereotyped plates, are ruinous to eyesight. The letters are blurred and gently smeared so that they run into each other, nothing being clear and distinct. The same is true of the cheap editions of the 'Encyclopedia Britannica,' which may not be so bad for occasional reference, but will, if stuck to, put out the eyes of the incautious, who, if they knew the dreadful fate before them, would read as pathetically against this cheap edition as little Prince Arthur with Hubert against having his eyeballs seared with hot iron at the command of cruel King John."—Indianapolis Journal.

Jim Rice Killed in Texas.

James T. Rice.

JAMES T. RICE.

PRINCETON, Ky., July 12.—(Special.)—This morning Clay Rice, a farmer of this county, received a dispatch from Cleburne, Tex., stating that his son, James T. Rice, had been killed near that place. A few years ago James T. Rice was a manufacturer of plug tobacco in Hopkinsville, Ky., and was considered one of the most promising young men in this section of the State. He went to Texas about one year ago.

Mr. Rice was manager of the Hopkinsville Tobacco Manufacturing Co. until the spring of 1891, when he sold out and went to Princeton and later to Texas. He was a genial, clever young man whom everybody liked and his death must have been the result of accident, as he was by no means quarrelsome in disposition it is not likely that he was engaged in any disturbance.

A Prosperous Kentuckian.

Mr. G. V. Bryan, of Hailey, Idaho, was a delegate to the Chicago convention and is now in New York. He will visit this city on his way home. The Boise City correspondent of the Anaconda Standard sent the following gossip about Mr. Bryan last spring:

"Col. G. V. Bryan of Hailey, Idaho, who represented Alturas and Logan counties by proxy, in the recent Democratic State Central Committee meeting, is one of Idaho's foremost mining men, as well as one of her leading Democrats. He was born in Hopkinsville, Kentucky in 1846. He left his native State in 1870 for New York city, where he spent 16 years of his life. In 1886 he came to Hailey, Idaho, and engaged at once in the mining industry, in which he has been remarkably successful. Colonel Bryan is one of those whose faith has ever been strong in the great future of Hailey and the famous Wood River mineral belt. He interested New York capital and purchased the well known Red Elephant mine, which had been a large producer but failed and was practically abandoned. A force of men was put to work developing this property, and at times it seemed dark for the owners, but after considerable expenditure rich bodies of ore in vast quantities were struck. At length a stock company was organized, known as the G. V. B. Mining Company, with Col. Bryan President and superintendent. The Col. owns half the stock and New Yorkers own the rest.

The milling capacity of the company is limited, yet the net proceeds are $18,000 per month. Mr. Bryan says that sufficient ore can be obtained to run a mill three times the capacity of the present one, and that he will begin, in a very short time, to enlarge the plant and to make other needed improvements. The Red Elephant is a bonanza, and will make its owners rich men. Like many other prominent mining men, Mr. Bryan is a bachelor, but is frank to say that such will not be the case forever, as a fair one has already accepted his offer and the happy event is to take place in the near future. The Colonel's friends say good-naturedly that his future bride will be more lucky, perhaps, than many young ladies, as she will get a husband and at the same time a "Red Elephant," which is by no means similar to the conventional "white elephant."

A Lost Art.

The art of cameo-cutting may almost be classed among the lost arts, so rare it is in the present day to see a beautifully cut cameo, and so little attention is paid to the work. An effort is now being made in England to revive cameo-cutting by making it an industrial occupation for women. In the arts and trades exhibition held recently in London several amateurs exhibited cameo work demonstrating what could be done by any one with a knowledge of drawing, with good taste and some instruction in the manual work. The cost of the sardonyx stone in which cameos are usually cut is but trifling. The value of a cameo consists almost wholly in the delicacy of the work upon it. It is a piece of work into which genuine art may be put. A great deal of cameo cutting has been done by rough artisans who were mere copyists of conventional patterns, and it is not strange that the fancy for cameos has died out. In our grandmothers' times it was not uncommon for portraits to be cut in cameo, and many of our old families possess valuable pieces of this description.—N. Y. Tribune.

Ellis The Man To Lead.

Having finished the round of complimenting the usual list of "probables" and "spokens-of," the thing for the papers of the district to do now is to pitch in and help make Mr. Ellis' nomination an enthusiastic expression of party harmony. It is evident to all right-thinking observers that Mr. Ellis is to be the nominee without opposition. Surely no new man would undertake to canvass eight counties in two weeks, to secure a nomination that would be the initial step in a campaign that will be red-hot from start to finish. In all the District we believe there is but one man in the present list of Congressional aspirants who possesses all the necessary qualifications for leading a winning fight this year. There are many good men in the District. Some are able and resourceful, some are eloquent, some are vigorous mixers, some aggressive and courageous in the face of opposition. Mr. Ellis is all of these combined. He is a man of brains and great force of character. As a speaker he is fluent, forceful and entertaining. As a hustler he is equal to the best of mixers, and above all he loves a fight and has a way of making it exceedingly interesting for the other fellow. He will make demagogues and political freaks, as well as honest opponents, turn tail early in the fight and keep them on the jump until November. Ellis will not and cannot be defeated. He is not the kind of man to make a losing race.

His record as a Democrat is all that could be asked.

He has voted and worked for tariff reform measures and upon the wool bill made one of the best speeches of the session. He has voted for free silver upon all occasions, receiving his instructions from the party platform of the Democrats of Kentucky in the convention of 1891.

He has cast no vote in Congress that was not in accord with the views of a majority of the Democrats in Congress. He has staid at his post throughout the whole session and has never embarrassed his party by neglecting his public duties when a quorum was needed. He is well known over the district and will be familiar with their requirements of the canvass before him. His two previous races have qualified him to meet and overcome any obstacles he may encounter. The best interests of the party will be subserved by his nomination.

PATIOS OF LAUGHTER.

Often the Gayest Exterior Cloaks the Saddest Heart.

There are a few worn-out traditions in this world of ours which it is about time the world discarded. One of them is that a merry, careless manner can only belong to a shallow mind, and a demure one always covers depth of thought and feeling.

There never was a greater mistake. A quiet demeanor may be quiet because of nothing rays underneath to disturb its serene surface. An unconcerned bearing is often a cloak to conceal real passion and earnestness. Sometimes "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh"—not.

There are people—perhaps not many, but there are some—to whom it is actually painful to reveal their inward enthusiasm. This may be owing to disposition or to education, perhaps to both. And to such the assumption of an indifferent or lively manner may offer the best protection to their real self. And in their dread of having this real self discovered they will often turn the disguise into a caricature, exaggerating the laughter, and making the foolish speeches more reckless, doing violence
